Irtemplate.json file with your Lightroom metadata. This file makes it easy for other software applications to access the Lightroom catalog files and metadata. Lightroom CC can edit, organize, optimize and publish up to 29 RAW photos and all 12 JPEG photos. It's the perfect solution for your workflow, and it works on both your desktop and mobile devices. In this article we will show you how to use Lightroom CC to convert RAW photos to JPEG in order to use them on social networks or upload to a website. Please keep in mind that converting RAW files to JPEG does not render the file as JPEG. It is only a way to let you preview your photos before converting them. After conversion, the RAW files are available as you see in the RAW Viewer panel. You can always see the state of your image if you click on the preview button. Convert RAW photos to JPEG The steps to convert RAW to JPEG are easy. You just need to use the Image>Adjustments>Convert to JPEG option. Convert an image

After opening a RAW file, you can click on the image icon. After clicking on the image, a dialog box will open with the following options: The image you want to convert will be in the main area. Click OK to open the dialog box to choose the conversion settings. In the upper area you can change the maximum file size (the original file will be the same size) and the JPEG quality. After choosing the options, click on OK to convert the image. After conversion, the RAW file is available in the RAW Viewer panel. You can now see the images with all the adjustments that you have applied. When you have finished with the adjustments, you can click on the stop button. You can click on the option again to choose if you want to save the original file as a new file or continue with a new copy of the same file. You can also select the name of the new image and click on OK. The file will be saved as a new copy with the same name as the original file. You will not be able to distinguish between the original and the new copy of the file. You can also select if you want to open the new JPEG file and go to the main screen or
